

MEDIA RELEASE

The current status of academic activities of the University of Peradeniya

The university has been continuing with online teaching during the last two weeks, in addition to onsite teaching conducted for some batches of students. A few more batches have been instructed to report to the university on July 4th for examinations, and clinical and practical training. The university will continue to monitor the impact of the fuel shortage on functioning of the university and the faculties will invite more batches of students to report to the university as the situation improves. Meanwhile, online teaching commenced two weeks ago will be continued uninterrupted. The university is committed to make all efforts to provide students with essential services during this time.
